

The Australian Women's Register

Entry type: Organisation

Entry ID: AWE0806

National Labor Women's Network

(1996 -)

Born 1 January, 1996, Canberra Australian Capital Territory Australia

Occupation Political party

Summary

The National Labor Women's Network (NLWN) was established in 1996 and is the peak women's organisation within the Australian Labor Party. It aims to increase the numbers of women active in the Labor Party at all levels, to facilitate and strengthen relationships between the state Labor women's organisations and the National Network. Membership is open to all current financial women members of the Australian Labor Party. The National Executive comprises representatives from all states and territories. The current Convenor is Nicola Roxon, Federal Member for Gellibrand, Victoria.

Published resources

Book

The last bastion: Labor women working towards equality in the parliaments of Australia, Reynolds, Margaret, 1995

Edited Book

Party girls: Labor women now, Deverall, Kate, [et. Al], 2000

Resource

Trove, National Library of Australia, 2009

Author Details

Rosemary Francis

Created 30 March 2004

Last modified 7 April 2004